

SOLDIERS LIKE LIFE IN ARMY

Disprove Rumors That Men of Camp Travis Are Ill Fed and Mistreated.

Camp Travis, Texas, July 27.—German propaganda throughout the United States have spread broad rumors and numerous false reports of how drafted men in the army were mistreated by their officers, how they were ill fed, poorly clothed and quartered, and how sanitary conditions were "awful." But their great "anti-war" movement merely proved a boomerang, for it has led thousands of those who have come to Camp Travis, as well as to other camps, to write letters home at once denying and refuting many of the rumors brought to them of the hardships they would endure.

Every week thousands of letters pass through the hands of the camp publicity officer, written voluntarily to the newspapers of the home towns in the drafted men by the army men. They are almost indicative of what is to be found in the training camps. Each man tells his experience of army life and how he has found the discipline, food and sanitary conditions.

A few experts have been gathered prominently. They agree in particular that letters from home "It is something that should be forgotten, to help the soldier and the cause. Plenty to Eat No Waste."

Some of the excerpts typical of the others, follow:

"I am in love with this place. We have one fine law, that is there shall be no bread, and a crumb, wasted, and it all."

"I am tempted to tell some of you underfed people to take Sunday dress with me. For this and heat that won't stand up. We have the best to eat, a great variety, and all we can eat, but don't waste a thing. I don't remember having seen a fly since landing here."

"If every person in the state could come here and remain until he caught the spirit of the United States in this thing there would be no further need for speaking campaigns to sell Liberty bonds, thrift and war savings stamps, and to carry on the Red Cross and similar organizations."

"The boys are proud of their company and determined to make it the best in their battalion. All cleaning up to do without grumbling and is thoroughly carried out."

"We are getting along well. I am enjoying life all right, and all I hate about the army is that I did not enter long ago. I would have been a man by now."

"I always thought life in the army was fierce, it is not. There were 12 of us who left Philadelphia in the morning in June, 1917. Homer Jarvis of Pueblo, joined the same branch of the service on the same date. The men met at Max's hotel, became members of the same company, and were sent to the Philippines as marines. They completed their enlistment without incident, and both were discharged at Brooklyn, N. Y., July 21, 1917. Here they separated, one going to the radio. A few days ago the former comrades again met in the Denver business recruiting station, where each had gone to recruit. Both were accepted and have been assigned to the same company."
